

First Term English Test 1Read the text carefully then do the activities

The Algerians used to eat home-made vegetable and meat food. Sold food hadn't yet been known by this society they fixed "Couscous" or "ta'am", "Berweel", "bouzelouf" "douara" and other common dishes. Now people due to time changes tend to eat prepared meals which are available in snacks and restaurants. Most of the time these varieties of food are of borrowed from occident cooking such as pizza, spaghetti macaroni; however, people still resort to their tradition and customs. Many families long to eat traditional dishes like "bourac" "bercoucos" hareera" and "shorba" and pastries like "makrouth", "msaman" Baghreen".

In the cities, most men, and some younger women, now wear European-style clothing. The traditional garb is a white woolen cloak, called a gandoura, worn over a long cotton shirt. A cape called a burnous is sometimes draped over the shoulders. Pottery, jewelry, and woven works are very popular in the open-air markets. Women's clothing is similar, although more complete in its coverage. The haik drapes them from head to foot, and is worn over loose pants, which are gathered at the ankle.

I can not give a look or a predict to the future Because in the evolution of fashion, and we as young people in its regard, and followed step by step, in short I think As a member of this community and a young woman of this age, that the clothes will be worse in the future than they are today.
